Excerpt: . CATALOGUE. i. Iwasa Matahei About 1630. Painting on a screen of two panels. A lady with musical instrument and pupil. The Ukiyo is a school of Japanese painting and print designing, which for the last three centuries has been the special organ of expression for the common people. Its artists, sprung mostly from the ranks of the people, confined their subjects to the occupations and recreations of their class. Every change of fashion in the gay life of the capital at Yedo was faithfully followed in their drawings; and thus the Ukiyo, unlike the hieratic and idealistic schools of earlier days, has the charm of being a complete mirror of Japanese life. At first confined to painting, it soon spread with the discovery of block printing into book illustration; and still later into the elaborate single sheet print which could be used on...
